Glossary

- 1 Daily Lesson Plan Also known as Rancangan Pengajaran Harian (RPH) is a structured instructional document prepared by the teacher that outlines the learning objectives, teaching activities, materials, time allocation, and assessment for a specific day. It ensures that teaching is goal-oriented, organised, and aligned with the curriculum.
- 2 Ergonomic gestures Refer to body movements and postures that are performed in a natural, safe, and efficient manner to reduce physical strain, prevent injury, and promote comfort during daily tasks. In a preschool or teaching context, this includes how teachers lift objects, move furniture, interact with children at their eye level, or sit and stand during activities.
- 3 National Preschool Curriculum A government-endorsed educational framework that outlines the learning standards, objectives, and outcomes for each subject and educational level. It provides uniform guidelines for curriculum design, teaching, learning, and assessment to ensure consistent educational quality nationwide.
- 4 Pupil learning abilities The range of cognitive, emotional, social, physical, and language capabilities that determine how a pupil processes information, responds to instruction, and demonstrates learning across different contexts and domains.
- 5 Regulatory bodies guideline A set of rules, policies, or standards issued by authorised government or statutory agencies to govern, monitor, and ensure compliance within specific sectors such as education, health, safety, and childcare. These guidelines provide the legal and procedural framework for institutional operations.
- 6 Stakeholder In the preschool context, stakeholder include parents, teachers, principals, government agencies, community members, and relevant NGOs.
- 7 Structured learning A planned and organised approach to teaching and learning that follows a clear sequence of objectives, content, activities, and assessment, often based on a curriculum or syllabus. Structured learning ensures that pupils progress systematically through developmental stages.
- 8 Traffic flow Refers to the planned and controlled physical movement of pupils and staff within a learning environment. It includes structured routines such as queueing in class, walking to the dining area, washing hands, sitting for meals, cleaning up, re-washing hands, and returning to class. Effective traffic flow ensures safety, discipline, and smooth transitions in daily preschool routines.
- 9 Training provider A training provider refers to an institution, organisation, or company that offers structured skills development and training programmes aligned with national competency standards which includes providers conducting programs under the Sistem Latihan Dual Nasional (SLDN) and Sistem Latihan Program Bertauliah (SLaPB).

10 Yearly
Lesson Plan

Also known as Rancangan Pengajaran Tahunan (RPT) is a comprehensive yearly instructional framework that outlines learning objectives, content, themes, teaching strategies, and assessment methods for each week or month, based on the national curriculum. It serves as a guide for teachers to ensure balanced and progressive learning throughout the academic year.

STANDARD PRACTICE
NATIONAL OCCUPATIONAL SKILLS STANDARD (NOSS) FOR:
PRESCHOOL TEACHING
LEVEL 4

1. Introduction

Preschool sector, plays a pivotal role in the foundational development of children between the ages of 4 to 6 years. It is widely recognised as a critical phase that shapes cognitive, emotional, physical, and social development. In Malaysia, the preschool sector is part of the broader education ecosystem and is governed by several ministries and agencies including the Ministry of Education (MOE), the Department of Social Welfare (JKM), Jabatan Kemajuan Masyarakat also known as KEMAS and Jabatan Perpaduan Negara dan Integrasi Nasional also known as PERPADUAN.

Preschools provide structured learning environments that blend play-based activities with formal teaching to prepare children for primary education. The industry comprises both public and private providers, encompassing government-funded institutions, faith-based and NGO-run centres, as well as commercial kindergartens and internationally affiliated early childhood centres. With increasing emphasis on quality education and national policies such as the Malaysia Education Blueprint (2013–2025), the preschool industry has grown significantly in scope and demand.

The need for qualified and competent educators, principals, and support staff has become more pronounced to ensure that preschool services meet national standards in curriculum, safety, and child development. Moreover, the preschool industry is a vital component in promoting inclusive education, social cohesion, and long-term human capital development. As such, continuous investment in training, professional certification, and regulatory compliance remains central to the sustainable advancement of the preschool sector in Malaysia.

1.1 Occupation Overview

Preschool teacher profession requires specialized training to ensure effective teaching and child development. Preschool teachers are expected to develop and deliver lesson plans based on the National Preschool Curriculum, incorporating play-based and interactive learning techniques. They must manage classrooms efficiently, ensuring a safe, inclusive, and engaging learning environment while encouraging positive behaviour among children. Additionally, they monitor and assess children's development, adapting teaching methods based on individual learning needs.

Beyond academics, preschool teachers also play a key role in nurturing social and emotional development by teaching essential life skills such as sharing, cooperation, and empathy. Regular collaboration with parents is essential to discuss children's progress and provide guidance for continued learning at home. Moreover, ensuring child safety and well-being is a fundamental responsibility, requiring adherence to safety and hygiene regulations and readiness for emergency situations.

The push to professionalize preschool education in Malaysia has been ongoing. The requirement for a diploma became official policy in the 2010, and the year 2020 was the initial deadline by which all practicing preschool teachers needed to be diploma-qualified. As 2020 approached, the government provided support such as in-service training programs and scholarships to help unqualified teachers upgrade their credentials¹.

1.2 Rationale of NOSS Development

As of 28 February 2025, there are 7,577 preschool operating across the country, employing a total of 31,826 teachers. However, only 6,439 of these teachers, which accounts for approximately 20.2%, meet the minimum academic qualification requirements². This statistic highlights a significant gap in the qualifications of preschool educators in the current landscape.

To address this gap and uplift the quality of education in the sector, the development of the National Occupational Skills Standard (NOSS) for Pre-primary Private Teaching has been identified as a strategic initiative. It is anticipated that this development will contribute to an increase in the number of teachers meeting the minimum academic standards, thereby strengthening the overall quality and professionalism in preschool education nationwide.

This document serves as a strategic initiative to provide an alternative, industry-recognised qualification pathway for experienced preschool teachers who possess significant practical expertise but lack formal certification due to financial constraints, time limitations, or limited access to conventional educational routes.

In this context, the NOSS P854-009-4:2020: Preschool Teaching and Education Administration was originally developed to define the core competencies required within the preschool sector. However, the framework primarily centres around managerial and administrative responsibilities such as organisational planning, institutional governance, and supervisory functions rather than encompassing direct teaching practices, pedagogical leadership, or child-centred instructional strategies. While the objective was to standardise qualifications for preschool professionals, its limited emphasis on teaching and learning competencies has resulted in a disconnect from the actual instructional needs encountered in classroom settings.

Given the depth and breadth of leadership functions embedded in P854-009-4:2020, these competencies are more appropriately aligned with a Level 5 qualification, specifically for individuals serving in the role of a preschool principal, rather than early years teaching practitioners.

Consequently, a comprehensive review of the existing standard was undertaken, leading to the development of NOSS P851-002-4:2025. This revision was aimed at ensuring closer alignment with current industry demands, classroom realities, and contemporary pedagogical expectations. The review also involved redefining occupational titles to better reflect evolving professional roles and restructuring selected competencies to enhance their relevance to technical, instructional, and developmental aspects of preschool education. The key refinements and updates are presented in Table 1 below.

² Ministry of Education – Private Sector

As part of the curriculum review and alignment with current educational standards, the Competency Unit from ET-012-3:2012 – Preschool Teaching has been upgraded and repositioned to Level 4. This adjustment in line with the Malaysian government's policy to elevate the quality and professional status of preschool education. Table 2 shows comparison for competency unit of P851-002-4:2025 – Preschool Teaching and ET-012-3:2012 – Preschool Teaching.

1.3 Rationale of Occupational Structure and Occupational Area Structure

In accordance with the Malaysia Standard Industrial Classification (MSIC), which standardizes the categorization of economic activities within the country, the NOSS development committee has determined that the role of Preschool Teaching falls under Section (P) Education. Given the nature of the work, the complexity of the process, and industry practices, the 3-digit code that most closely aligns with this NOSS is Group (851), Pre-Primary and Primary Education.

Based on input from industry experts, the revised NOSS is designated at level 4 which in line with the Malaysian government's policy to elevate the quality and professional status of preschool education. NOSS development committee identified several key areas related to pre-primary and primary education, including Pre-primary Teaching Assistance, Pre-primary Public Teaching, Pre-primary Private Teaching, Primary Public Teaching and Primary Private Teaching. However, for the development of this specific NOSS, the committee's focus was exclusively on Pre-primary Private Teaching ensuring a structured and competency-based framework that aligns with national education policies and industry best practices, fostering high-quality early childhood education and professional excellence in the sector.

However, the competency standards for preschool teachers in both private and government institutions remain the same, ensuring uniformity in the quality of early childhood education across different preschool settings. Regardless of whether an educator works in a government-funded preschool or a privately owned institution, they are required to demonstrate the same level of knowledge, skills, and pedagogical competencies in areas such as curriculum implementation, child development, classroom management, assessment, and child safety. This standardization aligns with national education policies and industry best practices, ensuring that all preschool educators are equipped with the necessary expertise to foster children's holistic development and create a nurturing learning environment. The occupational structure and occupational area structure are shown in Figure 1 and Figure 2.

- a) Conduct daily routine activities;
- b) Perform preschool teaching and learning activities;
- c) Organise preschool classroom environment;
- d) Develop pupil's assessment; and
- e) Handle parental-community activities.

7. Work Conditions

Preschool teacher typically works in preschool, which may be run by the government, private institutions, NGOs or organizations. Their work environment includes classrooms designed to be child-friendly, incorporating colourful decorations, learning materials, and play areas. Lessons are conducted across all pupils development domains includes both indoors and outdoors activities, hands-on activities, storytelling, singing, communicating, reading and writing. Hygiene and safety are major priorities, as preschoolers are more prone to accidents and illnesses, requiring teachers to maintain a clean and safe learning space.

The working hours for preschool teachers generally, though this may vary depending on the type of institution. Government-run preschools, such as those under the Ministry of Education (MOE), Jabatan Kemajuan Masyarakat (KEMAS) and Jabatan Perpaduan Negara dan Integrasi Nasional (PERPADUAN), usually follow school hours and finish earlier, while private preschools may require teachers to stay until 5:00 PM to accommodate extended childcare services. Some international preschools also have longer teaching hours but offer better salaries and benefits. Despite their scheduled hours, many preschool teachers continue working at home, preparing lesson plans, reviewing pupils' progress, and creating teaching materials.

The role of a preschool teacher is both dynamic and impactful, requiring a balance of creativity, patience, and strong pedagogical skills to foster early childhood development. Working in an engaging and stimulating environment, preschool educators create a structured yet playful atmosphere enriched with visual learning aids, interactive activities, and hands-on experiences. Their primary responsibility extends beyond academic instruction to include the cognitive, social, and motor skill development of young learners through storytelling, music, games, and creative arts. Effective classroom management is essential, as each child presents unique developmental needs and behavioural traits, necessitating adaptability and strong communication skills.

Beyond educational instruction, preschool teachers hold a critical duty in ensuring the safety, well-being, and overall care of their pupil. This includes maintaining a secure learning environment, assisting with essential needs, and fostering positive social interactions. A collaborative relationship with parents is fundamental to the holistic development of the child, requiring consistent communication to provide developmental updates, address challenges, and reinforce learning strategies at home.

While direct classroom engagement may constitute a portion of their responsibilities, preschool teachers also dedicate substantial time to lesson planning, curriculum development, pupil assessment and professional collaboration. Their work demands a high level of organization and commitment, yet it offers profound professional fulfilment. The ability to witness and contribute to a child's growth from foundational learning to increased confidence and social engagement is an invaluable reward. Preschool educators serve as the architects of early education, shaping not only academic skills but also essential life foundations, making their role indispensable in a child's lifelong learning journey.

8. Employment Prospects

As Malaysia moves toward professionalizing the preschool sector, employment prospects for preschool teachers are expected to become more competitive, with institutions preferring teachers who have at least a diploma or degree in early childhood education. This shift encourages educators to pursue further qualifications and professional development to remain competitive in the job market. Apart from traditional teaching roles, experienced preschool teachers can advance into positions such as head teachers, curriculum developers, preschool principals, or early childhood education trainers. Additionally, some educators choose to venture into entrepreneurship by establishing their own kindergartens or childcare centres, contributing to the growing early education industry.

In accordance with the Malaysian government's continuous efforts to improve early childhood education and the increasing number of working parents seeking quality preschool education for their children, the job outlook for preschool teachers remains stable and is expected to grow steadily. Those with higher qualifications, specialized training, and experience in innovative teaching methods will have better career opportunities and higher earning potential in the future.

The profession offers structured career progression, with teachers able to advance into leadership roles such as preschool principal, curriculum developer, or education consultant through higher qualifications. Entrepreneurial opportunities also exist for experienced educators seeking to establish their own kindergartens or childcare centres, supported by government incentives for early education businesses. Additionally, educators specializing in special needs education and bilingual instruction (English, Mandarin, Tamil, or Arabic) are increasingly sought after, particularly in private and international preschools where multilingual and inclusive education is a priority.

Preschool teacher salaries are influenced by factors such as qualifications, experience, and the type of institution. At the entry level, preschool teachers may receive a minimum monthly wage of RM1,700. This corresponds to a daily rate ranging from RM65.38 to RM98.08, depending on the number of working days per week, or RM8.72 per hour³. Earnings may increase with accumulated experience or specialized competencies. In addition to financial remuneration, preschool teachers enjoy job stability, opportunities for continuous professional development, and exposure to international best practices through globally recognized teaching methodologies.

As part of Malaysia's long-term Education Development Plan (PPPM) 2013-2025, early childhood education remains a key national priority, ensuring sustained job growth and professional development for preschool educators. With the continuous expansion of preschool education and the rising demand for high-quality early learning experiences, the field presents a rewarding and future-proof career path for those passionate about shaping the next generation.

9. Up Skilling Opportunities

Beyond formal education, preschool teachers in Malaysia can enhance their skills through professional development programs, workshops, and short courses offered by institutions like the Ministry of Education (MOE), the Department of Social Welfare (JKM), higher training institutions and private training providers. These programs cover areas such as child psychology, special needs education, digital learning integration and classroom management techniques.

Moreover, with the increasing awareness of inclusive education, many teachers are seeking certification in special needs education, allowing them to support children with learning disabilities and expand their career prospects.
