3.4 “The Art Of Leadership’ explains:

- i) A leader is one who has followers.
- ii) A leader deserves to have followers if he or she has earned recognition.
- iii) Authority alone is no longer enough to command respect.
- iv) A leader sees things through the eyes of followers.
- v) A leader puts himself or herself in the shoes of the follower and helps make their dreams come true.
- vi) A leader does not say, “Get going!” Instead, a leader says “Let’s go!” and leads the way.
- vii) A leader does not walk behind with a whip, but is out in front with a banner.
- viii) A leader assumes that followers are working with the leader, not for the leader.
- ix) A leader considers followers to be partners in the work and sees to it that everyone share in the rewards.
- x) A leader glorifies team spirit.
- xi) A leader duplicates himself or herself in others.
- xii) A leader is a person builder, helping followers grow big because the more big people there are, the stronger the organization.
- xiii) A leader does not hold others down, but lifts them up.
- xiv) A leader reaches out his or her hand to help followers scale the peaks.
- xv) A leader has faith in people, believes in them, trusts them, and thus draws out the best in them, enabling them to rise to high expectations.
- xvi) A leader is a self-starter.
- xvii) A leader creates plans and sets them in motion.
- xviii) A leader is a person of thought and of action, both a dreamer and a doer.
- xix) A leader has a sense of humour.
- xx) A leader is not a stuffed shirt.
- xxi) A leader can laugh at himself or herself.
- xxii) A leader has a humble spirit.
- xxiii) A leader can be led by others.
- xxiv) A leader is not interested in having his or her own way, but works to find the best way.
- xxv) A leader always has an open mind.

xxvi) A leader has high goals, strives to make the efforts of himself or herself and his or her followers contribute to the enrichment of the entire group.

4.0 Delegation of responsibilities is supported by appropriate authority.

4.1 Authorisation granted by the employer is to ensure responsibilities are carried out responsibly and achieves the objective/s.

4.2 Guidelines need to be known and understood by the group's leaders. Among the main ideas of a leader in an organization are:

i) Required at all levels

Leadership is a function which is important at all levels of management. In the top level, it is important for getting co-operation in formulation of plans and policies. In the middle and lower level, it is required for interpretation and execution of plans and programs framed by the top management. Leadership can be exercised through guidance and counseling of the subordinates at the time of execution of plans.

ii) Representative of the organization

A leader, e.g. a manager is said to be the representative of the enterprise. He represents the company at seminars, conferences, general meetings, etc. His role is to communicate the rationale of the enterprise to the public. He is also the representative of his department which he leads.

iii) Integrates and reconciles the personal goals with organizational goals

A leader through leadership traits helps in reconciling/ integrating the personal goals of the employees with the organizational goals. He is to co-ordinate the efforts of people towards a common purpose and thereby achieves objectives. This can be done only if he can influence and get co-operation

iv) He solicits support

A manager is a leader and he is also a person who solicits support and co-operation of subordinates. A leader encourages suggestions and if possible implement them into plans and programs of enterprise if it is a good suggestion. Thru thus he can solicit full support from employees which results in willingness to perform in work and thereby improves the effectiveness in handling a concern.

v) As a friend, philosopher and guide

A leader must possess the three dimensional traits in him. He can be a friend by sharing the feelings, opinions and desires with the employees. He can be a philosopher by utilizing his intelligence and experience and thereby guiding the employees as and when time requires. He can be a guide by supervising and communicating the employees the plans and policies of top management and secure their co-operation to achieve the goals of a concern. At times he can also play the role of a counselor by counseling and a problem-solving approach. He can listen to the problems of the employees and try to solve them.
