INFORMATION

1. Overview

1.1 Event Coordinator

Also known as event specialist. This person is taking charge of the planning and running of every facet of events. Generally, the coordinator is to make sure that the event runs smoothly, efficiently and could handle any crisis that may come up. Event coordinator controls an event from conception to clean up.

An event coordinator requires to possess the following norms and abilities.

i. Communication Ability

The ability to discuss and listen to clients' needs and presenting ideas and solutions to their requirements. A coordinator also works with suppliers, contractors, staff and many other parties. Customer service, linguistic skills and interpersonal skills are vital.

ii. Calm and Dependability

He is capable to work under pressure. Many things can go wrong during an event. The coordinators need to remain calm and steady during such an incident and ensure the event progresses well.

iii. Computer Skills

The current event planners rely on computers to communicate, plan, budget preparation and organize their events.

iv. Negotiation Skills

He is capable to discuss and negotiate on prices and schedules with clients and contractors.

v. Organizing Skills

Many things can happen during planning and in meetings. The coordinators need to stay focused and manage to structure the events so that it goes on without a hitch.

vi. Problem Solving Skills

Inevitably, anything may go wrong at an event. The coordinator should be able to quickly manage and resolve the issue.

1.2 Encourage Organization Event Coordination

The followings are amongst the tasks of an event coordinator

- i. Talk with clients about events and offer suggestions to ensure their requests are met.

--------------------------	--------------------------------	--

- ii. Negotiate the types and costs of services to be provided, in line with a budget.
- iii. Organize the venue and ensure that it is appropriately set up, with regard to seating and decorations.
- iv. Consult with management to ensure adequate staff members are rostered for duty, and with catering staff to plan the menu.
- v. Consult with service providers such as entertainers and transport companies.
- vi. Coordinate staff to ensure the program of events occurs on time (for example, speeches and the serving of food and refreshments).
- vii. Oversee work by contractors and report on variations to work orders.
- viii. Find solutions to any problems that arise concerning services or programs provided.
- ix. Advise senior management on matters requiring their attention and implement their decisions.
- x. Follow up with clients to arrange payment and, after the event, to evaluate the service rendered.
- xi. Collect and analyze data on projects undertaken, and report on project outcomes.

Depending on the size of the establishment, events coordinators may work independently or as part of a team. They often work irregular hours, and on weekends or even public holidays.

1.3 Personal Requirements

The following criteria needed to be observed by an event coordinator

- i. Enjoy working with people.
- ii. Good organizational and time management skills.
- iii. Attentive to details.
- iv. Good interpersonal and supervisory skills
- v. Good communication skills.
- vi. Neat personality and appearance.
- vii. Computer literate.
- viii. Able to negotiate, delegate and work under pressure.

2. Organization Event Objective

2.1 Objectives Of The Event

The objectives of the event are the targets of which the management wishes to achieve at certain level by prescribed timings. Developing and sustaining the present concepts which are specific to management's goals as well as providing platforms or alternatives for the expansions and further developments.

2.2 A Secondary Objective

The secondary objective is to analyze and estimate the targeted goals as to whether could be achievable or not, by applying the available resources efficiently with the schemes and exploring possible options concerning the current demand. Consideration must also include the future demand and possibilities in the running of the organisation due to political and nature preservation constraints.

2.3 Good Event Planning

Good event planning begins with knowing what you are trying to accomplish. Clearly define your goal. It will be very valuable to you as you go through the planning process. Knowing your goal can also help you avoid unintended growth and expansion of the event. The followings are to be considered during event planning;

- i. What is the primary purpose?
- ii. What kind of experience do you want your guests to have?
- iii. What environment/ambient are you going for?
- iv. What are the events' goal?
 - Fund raising?
 - Prospecting
 - Campaign kick off
 - Training session
 - Education
 - Celebrations and etc

2.4 Vision and Goals

Vision is a plan on what the organization is going to be in future. Therefore, a potential estimation considering various options is highly desirable.

Planning an event can be intimidating and scary, but creating your event objective early with 5Ws will save a lot of frustration and headache. The vision and goals can easily be planned and executed. The result is positive.

The 5 Ws plan are;

- i. WHO Who will attend your event, who will be your organizers, do you need sponsors and/or partners, and will clients attend? You will need to know how many people you expect to attend because this will affect other decisions such as how much food to order, seating arrangement, the venue etc.
- ii. WHAT The 'what' is composed of a few aspects like;
 - a. What is the name of the event?
 - b. What is the event about, ie car show, international festival, etc.?
 - c. What are the obligations of the attendees, if any?
 - What is dress code like?
 - Do they need to purchase ticket before the event?
 - Is it by invitation only?
 - Complimentary event?
 - Is it payable event?
 - What is suitable menu?
 - Is it to cater for kids as well?
 - d. What is the theme of the event, music, clothes etc
 - e. What are you to do with event promotion
 - f. What is your budget
- iii. WHEN Date of event, keep in mind. Is it acceptable to clients?
- iv. WHERE Be ware of other events in same area.
 - a. Road closure, security, accommodation availability
 - b. Weather?
- v. WHY The reason why for the event to take place?

3 Event Rightful Team

In order to obtain a secured and effective team management set to run an event, we have to strictly adhere to the following steps.

3.1 Event Team Management

One needs a team to organize an event. No one can do everything by him/her self. This shows how important a team is for an event. Event failure in many occasions is due to mismanagement of the team.

3.2 Know Your Team

Just knowing the names, faces and job profile of your team members is not enough. You must have good knowledge of their personality, life style, likings, disliking, family background, status, educational qualification, knowledge level, customs, religion and especially their needs and wants. By fulfilling one's needs and wants, i.e. their physiological needs, safety needs, social needs, esteem needs, cognitive needs and self actualization needs, the team can be very productive.

Not everyone has similar level of needs and priority. Some may put recognition as more important than job security. The others look at job security is more important than the rest. If you could determine the needs of your team members and fulfil them in order to get optimum results from them.

i. Physiological Needs

It is the need to have food, water, warmth, shelter and other necessities for survival cause.

NO. KOD / CODE NO	Z-009-4:2015-M01/P(5/7)	Mukasurat / Page : 7 Drpd / of : 19
--------------------------	--------------------------------	--

Team members may not appreciate much on these needs, but it will terrify them with horrible discomfort, sickness and pain if these needs are not fulfilled. So it is the event manager's job to make sure that all the physiological needs of team members are met all the time in order to maintain their performance. Quote: 'Just imagine the performance of a person who has not taking any food or drink all day'.

To protect your team from psychological harm, make sure there are no internal conflicts (like ego clashes, disputes, conflict of interest etc) among team members. If there are conflicts, then resolve them judiciously.

ii. Safety Needs

It includes the need to be safe from physical and psychological harm. It also includes job security and financial security.

As an event manager you have to ensure safety of your team especially women. A person can't give his best in an unsafe environment.

Providing job security to your team is also very important. At no point any team member should feel that his job is under threat either by your actions or by someone else actions.

Take care of your team beyond the work place. If any team member is facing a financial problem, then help him as much as you can.

iii. Social Needs

It is the need to feel a sense of belonging and acceptance. Need to love and be loved by friends, intimate partner, family and social groups like your team.

To fulfil this need, there must be cordial relationship between you and the team and among the team members. A team member will not perform his best if he has considerable family problems. Try whatever you can to reduce his family problems. If you can't do much at least accept his problems and empathize with him. Try to reduce his stress by giving him a day off or engaging him in the sport he likes the most. Ask your team members to be as supportive to him as possible. All this will help.

People who have strong social needs should not be placed in a job where they have minimum interaction with people. They are the best for marketing or PR type jobs.

iv. Esteem needs

It is the need to get respect, recognition, fame and status.

Some people have stronger esteem needs than the other. You will have to identify those team members who have strong esteem needs and then find ways to fulfil those needs. For e.g. if a person is working very hard to get recognition among the team members and you are not giving him the recognition he deserves (by openly praising him or giving him promotion) then sooner or later his motivation level will go down and he will not give optimum results or worst still he will not perform and eventually quit the job.

--------------------------	--------------------------------	--

v. Cognitive needs

It is the need to understand, learn, discover and explore.

People who have strong cognitive needs should not be placed in a job which is monotonous and which doesn't offer any possibility of intellectual growth. Frankly speaking, people with strong cognitive needs are not suitable for event management jobs.

vi. Self Actualization need

It is the need to be the best. It is the need to become everything, one is capable of becoming.

Very few people have such type of need. If you have someone in your team with this need, then you will have both advantages and disadvantages. The advantage is that you can always expect optimum results from him. The disadvantage is that he will tirelessly seek for the position of leadership and if he doesn't get it, then he will leave you soon and may even become your competitor.

4. Group Event Coordination

There is saying that in order to be successful in one's undertaking, he must swim or get drowned. Real life experience is a pitfall, and there is no such thing as 'top-player'. The position of 'top player' is merely an illusion. Its definition is impossible to be determined because every mankind offers unique features and strengths.

Being a survivor does not mean that you should be the only one who would, and who could, succeed. Take an example of a beauty contest, all participants are striving for the crown. But in reality, every participant who managed to clinch the way to prestigious beauty titles is a survivor in her own way. It may seem as though they are competing for the crown, but in reality, each of them are cooperating within the beauty organization to raise some kind of awareness.

In a business structure, businesses forge partnerships to raise awareness among consumers, tapping each other's potential and maximizing it to the fullest. That is what we call coordination within competition; unity in diversity.

4.1 Develop Strength

By developing your own unique strengths and talents and focusing on cooperation instead of competition, we keep the ecology of the business world diverse and healthy. There is no need for anyone to claim a generalized top position. You have to work together to make the system function.

--------------------------	--------------------------------	--

4.2 The Event Industry

There are several loosely-defined terms in the event industry. That is, words that can be interpreted in different ways. The word 'event' by itself could mean anything from a birthday party to benefit concert. The point is, we all speak within our own context, but sometimes you need to take a step back to make sure everyone understands exactly what is being said.

4.3 Event Planning

When it comes to event planning careers, some people outside the industry may get confused at the difference between an event planner and an event coordinator.

Generally speaking, the planner makes the critical decisions regarding the what, when, where, who and how. An event coordinator on the other hand, is responsible for making sure all the details are executed, and that each vendor shows up on time and performs appropriately.

4.4 Event Coordinator

Larger organizations may have two coordinators for every planner, while smaller operations might only have one coordinator that serves the needs of all executive decision makers. Either way there is typically a direct line of supervision over the coordinator position. This does not mean that the event coordinators have it easy. Most of them have difficult task of organizing everything on-site with only a few hours before the event begins. This, of course is when most problems occur, which is why a good coordinator is focused, organized and resourceful.

At the core of any event-related organization is the event coordinator. This is the person responsible for supervising and executing all of the details from setup to tear down.

Event coordinators are typically more hands-on than planners and administrators. Their primary role is to oversee the execution of details provided by the lead planner. Thus, it is the lead planner who makes the final decision regarding venue selection, meal choices and itinerary times, while the event coordinator insures everything goes as planned.

Depending on the company or organization, an event coordinator may have other responsibilities. Here is an overview of specific duties that accompany coordinator positions across various industries.

i. Corporations

In a corporate environment, the coordinator reports directly to a lead planner or executive decision maker. The coordinator becomes the direct contact between the event vendors (hotels, caterer, etc.) and the supervisor. His job is to effectively carry out the plan designed by management. On event day, it is his responsibility to make sure everyone gets where they needs to go, and see that the event is setup correctly.

--------------------------	--------------------------------	---

ii. Hotels & Venues

Event coordinators for hotel and venues report to the banquet director or sales manager. On the facility side, an event coordinator discusses all the details with the client and then communicates this information to department heads within the venue. This is done both through the creation of banquet event orders and meeting directly with the team. On the day of the event, the venue coordinator is present to greet the client and provide general supervision to his staff.

iii. Seminar & Learning Institutions

There are several companies that offer regional learning opportunities across the country.. These companies operate from a central corporate office and travel to different cities to teach live seminars. Here the event coordinator is responsible for booking the necessary hotels and classrooms, and communicating between students, speakers and venue representatives. Most of the time this work is done at the corporate office, but there could be times when the coordinator needs to travel onsite.

iv. Non-Profit Organizations

Large non-profit organisation such as Red Crescent Society and other NGOs hold plenty of events every now and then, because they serve so many different groups. The number of events, combined with limited budget, means non-profit event coordinators will be asked to perform a wider range of duties. This can include things like organizing volunteers, participating in fundraising and soliciting material donations. Non-profit careers are not for everyone, and it is important to be passionate with their cause because much of the works are indeed a labour of love.

v. Independent Planners

Event planners that become successful running their own business will eventually expand their operations. Their first hire will likely be an assistant coordinator. They are not only with the event coordinator and expected to work with clients and vendors, but they will also have to serve the needs of the business owner as well. That means handling some of the more time consuming tasks that will keep the owner in growing his/her business further. On the bright side, working for an independent planner offers an unprecedented opportunity to learn as the coordinator and will be immersed in all facets of the business.

4.5 Right Event

NO. KOD / CODE NO	Z-009-4:2015-M01/P(5/7)	Mukasurat / Page : 11 Drpd / of : 19
--------------------------	--------------------------------	---

The best way to select an event is to consider the criteria that will lead you to one of these two natural conclusions;

- It looks like a good bet OR
- Back to the drawing board

i. Choosing the Event

To see which of these two directions you are heading for, consider its difficulty. Some people or organizations may endure painful debates about the purpose of an event. They say not everyone would attend the event because of other constraints, such as too high ticket prices. But if your principal goal is to raise fund, you will have to overcome the belief that you are discriminating against those lower income earner. On the other hand, if the major purpose of the event is to increase public awareness, having more people to attend it at a lower price may help you achieve the goal. If your targeted audience for the event is successful business man who wants to show support for this population and who also has the means of giving notably to the cause.

ii. Types of Event

- a. There are two types of events, say A and B. Type A generally raises more collections, but less public awareness. In this case, they seem to have the following characteristics;
 - high individual cost to participate
 - smaller attendance
 - lower administrative and advertising investment
 - more donor prospect
 - greater loyalty to the organization on the part of those attending
- b. Type B events normally succeed at raising the organization's visibility, but they often require a bigger investment of time and produce a smaller financial return in short run. They have the following characteristics;
 - low individual cost to participate
 - larger attendance / higher visibility
 - higher administrative and advertising cost
 - fewer donor prospects
 - less loyalty to the organization on the part of those who participate

NO. KOD / CODE NO	Z-009-4:2015-M01/P(5/7)	Mukasurat / Page : 12 Drpd / of : 19
--------------------------	--------------------------------	---

Whatever you determine your goals to be, do not just talk about it, make sure they are written down, so that everyone who is working on the event will have a clear picture of why the event is being held.

iii. Event Cooperation

Partnership or rather joint venture to implement a proposed event is a great idea. If you want to minimize the risk for your organization, that is a viable choice to be secured and implemented. In this case you could share or transfer the capacity of organizer to the other party to assume the legal and commercial risks.

If you want to remain as owner of your event concept, the other party remains to be your partner for the overall organization of the event, whereby you could absorb your partner's extensive industry experience. Hence, making your event a success.

iv. Eligibility

The following criteria will be of great advantages when used to evaluate eligibility on requests for cooperation status.

a. The Relevance Of The Event

In cooperation status denotes that an event is likely to be of interest to both parties. Consequently the topics covered by an event should be of interest to the partner's community.

b. The Scientific Quality Of The Event

Established events seeking in cooperation status are asked to provide evidence on the scientific quality of the event. Such evidence may include;

- Information on the acceptance rates of previous occurrences of the event
- Reviewing procedures (e.g. lists of program committee members of previous events, details on how contributions are selected for inclusion, etc.)
- Contribution formats (e.g. length and format of contributions)
- Details on dissemination routes (e.g. publisher, availability online, etc.)

New events will be asked to provide evidence that indicates the likely quality of the event. Such evidence will include, details on the publicity arrangements, likely sponsors, review process, and the estimated size of the event.

c. The Background and Experience Of The Organizers

NO. KOD / CODE NO	Z-009-4:2015-M01/P(5/7)	Mukasurat / Page : 13 Drpd / of : 19
--------------------------	--------------------------------	---

The organizing team should have clear connections to the other party and should generally include individuals with a record of publication and co-sponsored conferences. For smaller events, leading members of the organizing team (e.g., program chairs) should be established elements. The organizing team should also have experience organizing events of similar size and scope.

v. Performance Result Evaluation

You are just being nominated to coordinate a company's event. This is a great opportunity for you to show your skills, and potentially earn a rise in process. There is only one problem; you never been exposed to such planning for an event before. Not to worry. Plenty of others have found themselves in the same predicament, and you will succeed because you are organized and determined.

Just like any other event under taking, firstly you need to organize all the information you have and then identify the most urgent matters.

Before choosing a venue or hiring a speaker, you need to know the basic parameters of your events. It is almost impossible to talk details and costs with the third-party until you finalise your plan.

Here are key details you should define before contacting your potential vendors.

i. Date

Everything revolves around the date of your event. Ideally you want to have three potential dates in mind so that you can compare availability and prices across the board. Try to include different days of the week for maximum flexibility.

ii. Time Frame

One single hour difference can make an impact on your planning, so you really need to be specific about your anticipated time frames. For example, starting at 10am instead of 8am means you may not need to allocate a breakfast budget.

iii. Attendance Numbers

This is one detail that is often too broadly estimated for productive negotiations. Get realistic with your attendance projections. Discuss in advance who you will invite and put your projections together on a spreadsheet. Attendance and budget are directly correlated, so don't haphazardly guess about the number of people you think will attend.

NO. KOD / CODE NO	Z-009-4:2015-M01/P(5/7)	Mukasurat / Page : 14 Drpd / of : 19
--------------------------	--------------------------------	---

iv. Breakout Sessions

You may only need one banquet room if you are hosting a dinner, but a full scale conference will likely require additional breakout rooms and an exhibition space. Once again, you won't be able to measure costs until you define how much space you need. For conferences, the best approach is to plan a mock itinerary in your very first meeting. Sharing ideas and piecing them together on paper will help steer you through the next planning decisions.

v. Budget vs. Costs

It might sound impractical to work on a budget before knowing venue and catering costs, but working this way provides a benchmark for you to measure all of vendor proposals. Begin with your revenue sources.

- a. How much should you charge for attendance?
- b. Will you call on sponsors to help offset costs?
- c. What will exhibitors pay to participate?
- d. Revenues will ultimately dictate your budget, so it only makes sense to project them first.

vi. Marketing

After you have identified your revenue sources, the next step is to outline your marketing plan. What is the best way to reach and engage your revenue generators? Perhaps you have a list of potential attendees as an employer or membership association. That would obviously be helpful, but what about sponsors and exhibitors? If you are planning to attract more exhibitors then you must be able to reach them. Targeted marketing campaigns cost money, and that cuts into your revenues.

vii. Transportation and Lodging

Running a local conference typically eliminates any concerns about transportation. However, you still need to address lodging for speakers, exhibitors and special guests. Some hotels provide discounts on meeting space if you book enough room nights. The only way to capitalize on this is by knowing your lodging needs in advance. Go back through your attendance data and project how many guests are from outside your area.

Now all of this probably sounds like a lot of information to gather up front, and it is. But keep in mind that these are the details that affect everything else in the planning process. You might be initially attracted to the more 'glamorous' tasks, like site visits and menu planning. Just remember that their time will come. For now though, focus on the facts so that you can make the best decisions later.
